“ My favorite memory of Lora Jo is when we moved to the area and we were still in the old church. We had come to church and when it was time for Sunday School, Lora Jo told us to bring Scott to her room. Not long after we left him, he started crying and it kept getting louder. Bob got up and peeked into the room. Lora Jo assured Bob that Scott will be fine. But the crying got louder. This time Bob got him and he headed outside with Scott. Scott was crying and saying "Daddy don't kill me" all the way out. Of course all the adults were laughing. But Lora Jo just kept saying he will be fine. And he was better the next time we were there. So Bob didn't kill him. Lora Jo was a patient lady and wonderful with the little ones.
