“ So many memories to share but one comes to mind about when we got in to a fight over a pillow. He was determined that it was his and I was just as determined it was mine. If anybody knows either of us you should know neither would give in. We fought so hard with each other over this pillow that we finally tore it in half by accident, lol. He walked away with his half and I did the same and we neither one spoke of it again. Because believe it or not we were grown adults when this happened. So I think we were both a little ashamed and definitely a little embarrassed. One of many fights with him but also one of many memories that I will cherish forever. You will be greatly missed little brother. Love your big sister, Shelly.
